Jonathan Mills

Director for Electricity Market Reform in the Department of Energy and Climate Change.

Jonathan Mills is Director for Electricity Market Reform in the Department of Energy and Climate Change. He is responsible for delivery of the programme to introduce contracts for difference and a capacity market. These will enable investment in a new generation of power stations and underpin security of supply.

Prior to this role he was responsible for energy, environment and agriculture issues at HM Treasury. He has previously worked in a range of roles at the Treasury including reform of the taxation of multinational businesses and leading policy for the G20 London Summit in 2009. He has also worked in local government at the London Borough of Camden.
